Just as in the lifetime of Jesus, so especially in His Eucharistic presence, He forgives us our sins by leading us through His Spirit into a new realization of our sonship with Him of the Heavenly Father. He removes the illusions under which we live and perceive ourselves, God and others. And in that infusion of deeper faith, hope and love, we find deep healing of body, soul and spirit. We touch Him, the Divine Physician, and He touches us. His divine life pours into us, bringing us a new share in His eternal life.

The episode of the ten lepers follows from the parable of humble service read last Sunday. It again invites us to wonder at the gracious gifts of God. On his journey to Jerusalem, Jesus meets leprosy, an illness which cuts the sufferer off from worship and the presence of others. Like those poor in the psalms who call on the loving tenderness of the God of the covenant, the lepers cry out to the one in whom they discern a savior. In sending them first to those who are qualified to verify a cure, Jesus not only makes them a promise, he also puts their faith to the test. For, at that moment, they are not yet cured. They are healed "on the way," by obeying Jesus' word. Then, filled with joy, but forgetful of the giver, they scatter.

There is one exception, a Samaritan, a foreigner! For him alone the journey of faith is not complete until he returns to the giver of the gift. Jesus continues the dialogue by sending him forth once more, this time as a disciple.
